HYT Watches have just announced that they will be unveiling a new edition of their complex H2 timepiece, complete with a new blue liquid!

Very few details are available at the moment other than that the case material will be made from titanium and white gold and the new watch will be called the H2 Titanium & White Gold Blue. What's really bound to get fans excited though is the new blue/silver/white color scheme, complete with a new blue color liquid!

According to HYT it took 18 months of research and development to achieve just the right color they were looking for and I have to say it really changes the entire appearance of the watch. Expect this to be a very popular model for the brand this year, widening the appeal of what is already a very cool watch. No word on pricing or availability unfortunately but I will update as soon as I get more info.
