HYT H2 TITANIUM & WHITE GOLD BLUE

What it is: Vincent Perriard, watchmaking's unrivalled master of disruption, created HYT as the first brand to marry mechanical timekeeping with liquid indications. His watches have wildly futuristic movements incorporating Jules Verne-like miniature bellows that control the retrograde action of the fluid telling the hours.

Why you should buy it: HYT watches are not for first-time watch buyers. They are for the man who's transcended traditional timekeeping and wants something crazily polarising but irrefutably dynamic. The H2 is created by one of the best watchmakers on earth, Giulio Papi of Audemars Piguet Renaud & Papi, and now comes in a variety of materials with red, blue or yellow liquid.

Where to wear it: At the legendary 'Jimmy's' private cigar club in Singapore, featuring one of the world's greatest collection's of pre-Castro cigars and rare wines on earth. Jimmy Ng, the proprietor of the club, is rumoured to have commissioned a special edition of the HYT H1 with some of the world's rarest tobacco leaves embedded in the case.
